People used Yahoo Answers to ask weird questions, seek help, and make jokes. Closing Yahoo Answers will not affect your Yahoo account or other Yahoo services. IS THIS SUPPORT OF YAHOO EMAIL? The most famous thing, in a question that threw a meme, a confused soul who had learned little about reproductive science or spelling asked: "How does the baby form?" It was never known how many of the questions were asked. They were based on serious ignorance and curiosity, and how much was the intentional trolling. While we couldn't be more proud of what we achieved together, today we are reaching out to let you know that we have decided to close Yahoo Answers on May 4, 2021. When the show started in 2010, they used Yahoo Answers' questions to fill in listeners' mailings, he said. While some of the questions called it performance art, and others seemed a lazy refusal to look for answers, he said he sympathized with many of the people who asked. Quora is positioned as the most high-speed network that is most likely to attract a response from experts, and Reddit has a forum that invites people to idle curiosity to roam for free. Yahoo, in a letter to users, said it had decided to divert our resources from Yahoo Responses to focus on the products that best serve our members and fulfill Yahoo's promise of premium trusted content. A few questions and answers will stop on April 20, and be deleted from the Internet on May 4. It's not the first time Yahoo and other tech companies have removed products that were once popular without the benefit of archiving; 20 days of content posted on Yahoo Groups were removed in 2019, the same as Flickr removed 15 days of photos. McElroy said he wasn't sure what the podcast would do without its abundant set of questions. The message links to an FAQ, which details the shutdown timeline. People asked: "Can you order Gushers to make fruit juice? "Why is everything in my grandmother's house?" And that gave air to gaps in knowledge and admissions that may not have ^ to go: "How does a hug feel?Yahoo, owned by Verizon Media, shut down the Q&A service and deleted its files on May 4, erasing a corner^n of the internet that will be widely remembered for its "less than enriching contributions to human knowledge since its arrival in 2005. Less charitably, BuzzFeed News called it this week "one of the dumbest places on the internet. "Vulture said it was "populated entirely by Batman villains, aliens posing as humans, and that extra-^o neighbor to whom you were." instead of going down the fire escape in a snowstorm that would get caught in a conversation ^ with. "There is a ^ of evidence for that position^ n. As of April 20, the platform will no longer accept new submissions, the FAQ explains. "The weird, the dumb, the real, really insane: Everything found a place on Yahoo Answers". "Drew Davenport, a 34-year-old man in Camarillo, California, who for seven years examined questions to send to the podcast, said people said they they genuinely used the service to get through struggles at school, or to receive a sexual education they weren't getting elsewhere. But the service offered a real human reaction, for better or for worse, one longtime observer said.
